Hi ya!

It's the holiday season and everyone seems to be going a little crazy! We interviewed Brendan Fraser from Looney Tunes Back in Action and he said he'd rather be a rabbit (pg 14). Brittany Murphy is doing dog voices (pg 21), Jeremy Sumpter thinks he's Peter Pan (pg 22), Wendy Harmer is off with fairies (pg 74) and Dr Karl is predicting the future (pg 48).

It's a good thing we have our act together and can ask all the hard-hitting questions – like how do you go to the toilet when you're at the North Pole? No, it's not a joke

- it's seriously what we asked adventurer Eric Phillips.

Read his gross but entirely sensible answer on page 51.

Are you going a little bit mad this summer? Maybe you feel like Daffy Duck. Find out which Looney Tune character you're like by taking our quiz (pg 30). Then check out our massive Movie Madness section that starts on page 13. Anyhow I'd better get going - I have some Christmas shopping to do. Bye and merry Christmas!

DMAC OUT AND

We've been getting in to the holiday spirit here at DMAG. We rushed to Movie World to meet Wile E. Coyote and while we were there we checked out all the cool rides ...

It was great fun!!! Meanwhile, back in the office, Rosy the alligator checked out our magazine. She thought it was delicious. Then it was off to the Channel Ten Studios to film the DMAG Dare with Jade and Ryan from Cheez TV and the winner of the Harry Potter: Quidditch World Cup competition.

TO DMAG,

I have read your mag for a while now and I find it one of the best around. I like the Arcade game reviews, and the Weird Science section. I also like the comics, competitions and Yu-gi-oh! I hope that in the future the Arcade section will be bigger.

DEAR DMAG,

My name is Sarah, I am in grade three. Your Mag Rules! I hope you like my picture. Sarah Ayub, 8

I read Rubbishing Seals on page 45 of DMAG's October issue, and I really agree with Brad Page. I think people should put a stop to rubbishing the seal's environment. So please stop. That would be a big help. DMAG rules. From your number one fan, Jessica Pope, 10

Tim Nicholson, 8

I only started collecting your magazine since July this year. I have found it to be more interesting than K-ZONE. The things I like most about your magazine are the comics, puzzles, Harry Potter and the Movie Madness page. I also enjoy the dares that Jade and Ryan do. I think it's great getting posters and tattoos. Most of all I love entering the competitions. Anyway I have sent you a drawing.

I have been reading your magazine for about 7 years now.
I love homework BUT you and I do have lots of tests, exams and WHYY MAGAZINE!!!! I still find the time to read your magazine!! LOVE YOUR MAG??? LOVE your mag because you always have a great variety of subjects to talk about. Like, for example, you have gossip, reviews and education on celebs like Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen.
I also love articles about different cultures and topics that cover all the latest news and current events. I think they are pretty cool. I love Bar Simpson from "The Simpsons". That's why I love Bar (ABOVE) saying "Ah! Even I know, NOTHING! It isn't that." "D-MAG!"
Keep on being awesome!

Keep up the great work for many years to come!!

Love from Carmen Tran xoxo

POTTER THEORIES

In our September issue we asked if you thought there was a romantic future for Harry and Luna Lovegood.

Here are your theories:

Kayleigh Coleman, 13. No way! Harry does not and will not have a romantic future with Luna Lovegood. Luna is too weird and believes in superstition and that is not what Harry is about! The only way Luna will achieve love between Harry and her is if she cooks up a love potion, and I wouldn't put it past her. I think love will flourish between Harry and Cho-Chang though.

TK Christiansen, 12. I think there might be because they are so alike and she can see Thestrals, like him. Yeah, I reckon there's a strong chance.

Thomas Warren, 5. No, I think that Luna is somehow related to Harry.

Eileen McDonald, 11. I think that Luna Lovegood will eventually do something really heroic like save Harry's life and then Harry will have no choice. He's got no one else, has he? Though he doesn't really like her (yet) he has to pay her back sometime.

Beth-Ann Stam, 11. I think that this idea is a "joke" - I seriously doubt that Harry and Luna would ever have a romance. Luna just isn't Harry's type. I think we'd see Harry with Ginny Weasley before we'd see him with Luna. Perhaps we'll see Luna and Neville Longbottom in a romance - this would be a great match as they're well suited and it would be so good for Neville - Luna and Neville would understand each other well.

Dean Radford, 12. I think there will be because in the last chapter of The Order of the Phoenix they seemed to like each other and since Harry isn't going out with Cho Chang anymore I think there will be some romance between them in the sixth book.

Chantel Dyball, 9. Yes, because Harry and Luna have lots of things in common. It could also be because boys have funny ways of showing girls they like them - in Harry's case he teases her. No, because Harry could be liking Ginny or Lavender Brown after all they have been through in the Ministry of Magic.

If you'd like to win a Harry Potter library bag, send us your theories on this: Who will look after Buckbeak now that Sirius is dead? Send your entries to Potter Theories #22 PO Box 321 Terrey Hills NSW 2084. See page 98 for terms and conditions.

BRENDAN OF THE JUNGLE!

He is best known as George of the Jungle, but in real life, Brendan Fraser is even funnier – and he's just nuts about Looney Tunes cartoons – as we found out ...

DMAG: Hi Brendan, I know you've worked with animals before – what's it like working with cartoon characters?

Brendan: I grew up watching cartoons, so it was an honour!

DMAG: You're probably best known to DMAG readers as George of the Jungle. Do people still tell you to watch out for that tree?

Brendan: No they just scream "Hey George!" a lot. Lots of moms come up to me and tell me their kid's hurt himself by trying to do it. Remember kids – only George can do it. And those trees were made of rubber.

WHAT'S YOUR FAVOURITE ACME INVENTION OR CONTRAPTION?

The thing that made me laugh out loud when we went to the ACME warehouse was ACME Ball Bearings...

DMAG: Did you have to learn any special skills for George of the Jungle – like throwing spears or swinging from vines?

Brendan: There were some stunts where I was rigged on stuff, so I got to do a lot of swinging around on ropes and stuff, learning to be like in Cirque de Soleil or something. It was fun.

DMAG: In Back In Action you visit the jungles of Africa to find the Blue Monkey Diamond. Did you meet any old friends like Shep or Ape?

Brendan: Yes! The elephant in Back in Action is the very same elephant who played Shep in George of the Jungle. Her name is Tai, and she remembered me! She's just a gorgeous, noble creature. Her skin is actually pink with freckles, but they put grey make-up on her in George. She's just natural in Back in Action – no make-up this time.

DMAG: Is it harder to train an elephant or a monkey?

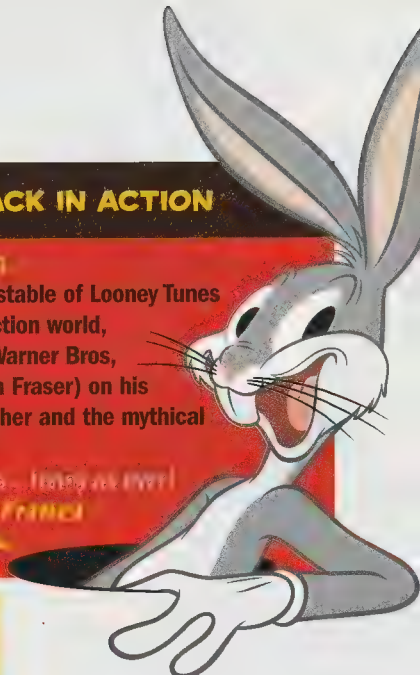

Brendan:
Elephant

LOONEY TUNES BACK IN ACTION

THE LIVE ACTION, BACK IN

Cartoons (nearly the entire stable of Looney Tunes characters) enter the live-action world, when Daffy gets fired from Warner Bros, and joins DJ Drake (Brendan Fraser) on his quest to find his missing father and the mythical Blue Monkey diamond.

★★★★★ - Daffy ad libbed... (Brendan Fraser)
See it in your town. With Frank Roger Partridge, Steve Zahn

WHICH CARTOON CHARACTER WOULD YOU RATHER BE:

- Marvin the Martian
- Bugs Bunny
- Daffy Duck
- Elmer Fudd

Brendan: Bugs. Definitely.

ass. You can train monkeys when they're young, but when they get older – they wise-up. They had to retire the monkey cause he would throw fits and do a lot of naughty things. At a certain age they won't even listen to trainers any more.

DMAG: How about for Looney Tunes – did you have to learn about explosives? Because there's lots of dynamite around usually!

Brendan: Yeah, there's heaps of dynamite. There's a character called Nasty Canasta who always turns up asking: "Are we going to blast 'em?" ... Jenna has a great line where she says, "dynamite, who has dynamite?". We didn't have to learn about explosives ... thankfully it's only the cartoons that get blown up.

DMAG: Does Daffy ad lib any of his lines?

Brendan: Daffy ad libs all his lines. Script? What script? He doesn't even read the script – he just throws it straight into Tweety bird's cage. Daffy doesn't even look at the script. Doesn't show up on time. He's cranky all the time.

DMAG: Is Bugs a nice guy or is he really full of himself?

Brendan: Bugs is the ice man... my favourite. How many cartoon characters have their own star on the Hollywood walk of fame? He sent me a bunch of carrots when I first joined the set.

MEET BRITTANY
MURPHY FROM THE HIT MOVIE
UPTOWN GIRLS, WHICH
FANNING...

DMAG: I just saw your face on a billboard - does it scare you when you see something like that?

Brittany: It's strange seeing your face on something that big! (laughs) At least I'm next to Dakota so that's good...

DMAG: Apparently Dakota is really smart. How did you treat her?

Brittany: She's my friend.

DMAG: Is it difficult to be friends with a nine-year-old?

Brittany: I have friends that are in their eighties as well - it's who you connect with personally and I connect with Dakota. We connected the moment we met each other. We have a great, fabulous time together. We enjoy each other's company so much. I saw her squeal over Britney Spears - she's a regular kid.

DMAG: How do you feel about being a role model for young kids?

Brittany: I think our youth is so very important and for me to be a part of shaping our youth ... if I could be a part of making young people learn something and make young people happy that's very important to me. That's one of the reasons why I wanted to be in this movie.

DMAG: Do you see yourself as a spiritual person?

Brittany: Yes very much so. Not in a phoney way, in a true way ... I believe that this is the way the world goes around.

DMAG: Who is the person you trust the most?

Brittany: My mom (sic).

DMAG: You've been in the news a lot in the past twelve months, especially about Ashton Kutcher. How has that been for you? (Brittany and Ashton were a couple when they co-starred in Just Married. Ashton is now seeing Demi Moore.)

Brittany: Oh my gosh, I know! I was with my mom and my aunt and we were laughing last night about something we read about me. It's hysterical. It's ridiculous, it's so funny. I always think there must be nothing going on the world that day to have a story about me everywhere. But you can't drive yourself crazy about these things.

DMAG: Apparently you can't drive - why is that?

Brittany: Oh, I'm going to take lessons soon. Hopefully by the next time we speak I will have my licence. I wanted to do it

OK this pic is from Brittany's other movie
- Good Boy. She voices

earlier but I haven't been in one place long enough to need it.

DMAG: How's your music career coming along?

Brittany: It's great. I love writing songs. I think people are going to be surprised when it all gets going. I want to do everything - sing, dance, act.

I've been singing and performing as long as I've been acting - it's just that the world doesn't know about it yet.

DMAG: When do you write better - when you're upset or when you're happy?

Brittany: When I'm upset.

When you're emotional about something in life that's when you're the best.

DMAG: You might be the next J-Lo if you're singing and acting...

Brittany: (laughs) Well, Jennifer Lopez has paved an exceptional path for myself and other people like that who are show people who love to sing and love to dance.

DMAG: Who were your idols growing up?

Brittany: Diana Ross and Barbara Streisand, Judy Garland, Madonna - multi-taskers. And Jennifer...

DMAG: It's not easy, it requires a lot of energy...

Brittany: Yes, well nothing is easy ... I don't like easy. When I sing and when I perform for people is when I'm at peace with myself.

Being Peter Pan

FIVE MINUTES WITH JEREMY SUMPTER
A.K.A. PETER PAN

12 DECEMBER 1999 (UK) 11 DECEMBER 1999 (US)

DMAG: What did you like about being Peter Pan?

Jeremy: Being able to fly and to sword fight.

DMAG: Were you in a harness to fly?

Jeremy: I was in a harness and they had wires on me and they shot me around. I went from here to there and back. They did all these cool things with me. It was fantastic.

DMAG: Did you have any training?

Jeremy: I had three months. They didn't really have a lot of time because they were getting behind, so they had me sword fight before each shoot.

DMAG: What are some of the sword-fighting techniques you learnt?

Jeremy: To keep your knees straight and your elbows straight and your hands straight because if you don't have that then you don't look good. And I had to learn what moves to do, how to block, parry, lunge - it was really difficult.

DMAG: What did you think of your co-star who played Wendy?

Jeremy: Rachel? She was great - I thought she was going to be one of those girly-girls you know, she turned out to be different and we were boyfriend and girlfriend.

DMAG: Were there any embarrassing moments when filming?

Jeremy: We had a few. The Lost Boys have these twins - Patrick and Lachlan - that picked their nose on set when the camera was going. I really liked working with them.

DMAG: How old are you?

Jeremy: 14. I've been acting for four years. The highlight has been doing this movie.

DMAG: How would you describe the sets - they looked quite magical.

Jeremy: They were like being out in the real world, they were like being in the forest, in the woods, the Never Land sets were really cool.

DMAG: What tips do you have for kids who want to get into acting?

Jeremy: It's a talent that you have to have. If you want to do it then give it your best shot. It's really hard to work ten hours a day and it's not like you can go out and do whatever you want. I worked six days a week for a year for Peter Pan.

DMAG: Did you pick up any language while you were in Australia?

Jeremy: I did ... I learned 'no worries mate' and 'beauty mate' and 'noice'.

PETER PAN

OUT: 18th December

RATED: PG

STARS: Jeremy Sumpter, Jason Isaacs

LET'S DUEL!

THE YU-GI-OH! TRADING CARD GAME DUELLIST LEAGUE WAS THE HOTTEST EVENT LAST SCHOOL HOLS. WE ASKED JOHN REDENBACH FROM TOYS R US THE QUESTION ON EVERYBODY'S LIPS...

DMAG: Are you going to do more?

John: Yes we'll probably have one or two more league events next year.

DMAG: How many kids participated?

John: Every store was booked out. We couldn't accommodate any walk-ins off the street, we had to ask kids to register for the following week ... we probably had 1500 kids each weekend.

DMAG: What was the best thing about it?

John: It taught gameplay because all the instructors were taught how to play the game. And hey, it frustrated the hell out of the parents because they didn't understand it. I think it was great to see kids meeting each other.

DMAG: Did you learn how to play yourself?

John: No there were just too many characters there were so many monsters.

DMAG: Was there a character that stood out?

John: I know the names Joey and Pegasus came up a lot ... the kids know much more than adults could ever hope to know.

And what did you guys think?

"That was cool - I'm definitely coming back next week!" Max, 11

"Totally awesome!" Erin, 6

"It was excellent - I won 100% every duel!" Tim, 7

DAFFY DUCK

Sure Daffy Duck is bossy, overconfident and full of himself, but that doesn't mean YOU are. You do share his zest for life though and that's a good thing. Just don't envy Bugs Bunny too much and you'll have a great future.

Taz the Tasmanian devil travels in a whirlwind. He destroys or eats everything in his path, but that doesn't mean YOU do. Like Taz you are full of energy and live your life at break-neck speed. And your craziness is kind of appealing.

TWEETY

Tweety may look like a sweet, innocent canary but he's actually a little schemer, though that doesn't mean YOU are. Like Tweety, you have a positive outlook and are really very smart. Don't take the Tweety thing too far though - it's 'pussy cat' not 'puddy tat'.

BUGS BUNNY

Bugs Bunny is one step ahead of everybody - he's one sly wabbit, but that doesn't mean YOU are sly. Like Bugs you're smart, witty and are pretty good at keeping your cool. You're going to have one interesting life!

WITH THE SANITARIUM WEET-BIX KIDS TRIATHLON EVENTS HEADING OUR WAY WE ASKED TRIATHLETE MILES STEWART FOR SOME TIPS

DMAG: What tips do you have for kids when they're racing?

Miles: Just concentrate on what you're doing and not what's going on around you. You always want to run fast when there's a crowd there but you can't go flat out the whole way. The key is to go the right pace so you don't have to slow down.

DMAG: What does a triathlon involve?

Miles: A 1.5km swim, a 40km bike ride and a 10km run.

DMAG: What's the hardest leg of the race?

Miles: I think the runs are always hardest because they are the last event and by the time you get there you're normally fairly tired.

DMAG: What's your strength?

Miles: I like bike riding because I came from cycling.

DMAG: What has been the hardest race to do?

Miles: I did a race in Japan, it was 38 degrees and 100 per cent humidity, it was so hot, there was no shade on the course. We ran beside the river and a lot of people were just running off the course and jumping in the river just to get away from the heat. I'm looking at the river going 'Don't look at the River'.

DMAG: What has been your strangest racing experience?

Miles: I did a race in Lapland

FAST FACTS

NAME: Miles Stewart

A TRIATHLON

which was 250km above the Arctic Circle and we had to stop because there were these reindeer crossing the road so we had to wait for these reindeer to move.

DMAG: What warm up do you do before a race?

Miles: On the morning of the race I normally run about 2-3km and ride 10-15km and then swim about 400-500m to warm up. That's about three times as long as a kids' TRYathlon - so kids - don't try this!

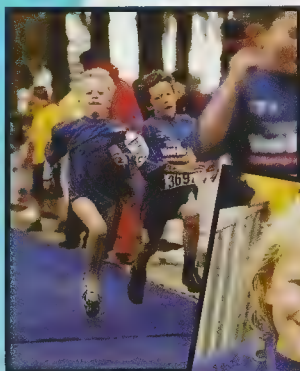

DMAG: What sort of training schedule do you have?

Miles: A normal week is about 30km a week swimming, 500km a week on the bike and 80-100km running.

I train six days a week and have one day off.

DMAG: What would you eat in a typical day?

Miles: Cereal - Weet-Bix - for breakfast, then I have sandwiches for lunch, pasta, chicken, meat and vegetables for dinner. I snack during the day, mainly on fruit.

DMAG: When did you start competing?

Miles: When I was 15.

My teacher was a race promoter and he said 'why don't you come down and give a triathlon a go?' He knew I swam and was competing in cross-country at school and racing bikes.

DMAG: For kids that aren't strong swimmers what do you advise?

Miles: Swimming is quite important, it's something that you learn quickly when you're young and it is very difficult to pick up when you're older. If you're looking at being a triathlete then swimming school is very important because between the ages of 10-15 you really get your stroke. Once you have it, you have it for life. If you don't have it you pretty much don't have it for life.

DMAG: Will kids competing in the TRYathlon get to meet you?

Miles: Yes I will be at a few of them. I did the one up at Noosa - I handed out medals with Kieran Perkins and then every single kid - there were about 350 of them - came up and we signed their shirts.

TA TA TARANTULAS

Native tarantulas are under threat, mainly from pet shops selling them as 'bird-eating spiders'. While some Australian tarantulas are found in trees and could eat nesting birds, most of the ones sold in pet shops are likely to have lived in burrows and eaten insects and the occasional frog or lizard. Dr Robert Raven, a spider expert at the Queensland museum, is concerned that some pet shops are selling rare tarantulas that haven't even been named and are new to science. And with about 10,000 tarantulas being sold each year, he's worried some species may become extinct. The tarantula shown here, otherwise known as the whistling spider, makes a whistling or hissing noise and grows to 20cm across – aaagh! Its bite won't kill you but it will be painful.

GECKO GOING

The Gulbaru gecko was only discovered in 2001 but it looks like it is soon going to disappear. This large, mottled brown, prickly gecko grows to a length of 13cm. It is only found in an area of 14 square kilometres in Queensland. And it looks like its habitat is dwindling. Conrad Hoskin, a student at the University of Queensland, discovered the gecko when he was searching at night and saw a pair of red eyes glowing in the dark. The Gulbaru gecko has no eyelids and has to moisten its eyes with its tongue.

Courtesy Conrad Hoskin.

Flying to paradise

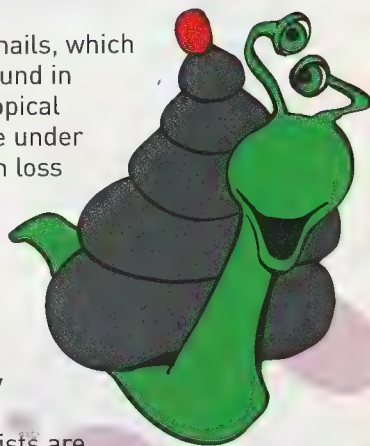

The beautiful buff-breasted paradise-kingfisher flies between Australia and New Guinea twice a year but no one knows why. The habitat and climate at both places is very similar, so why go to all the effort? The birds have long streamer-like feathers from their tail and this would make flying harder. Sarah Legge, from the Australian National University is hoping to find out why they migrate. Australian Geographic has just sponsored her research – so hopefully we'll soon have some answers.

Snails save lives

One snails, which are found in shallow tropical waters, are under threat from loss of habitat and people collecting the beautiful shells they live in.

Scientists are worried the snails will disappear before they fully understand some of the unique chemicals they make. One of them, conotoxin, has been shown to be effective in the diagnosis and possible treatment of lung cancer.

Dragon's bre

BAD BREATH. THAT'S WHAT MODERN-DAY DRAGONS KILL WITH. THESE AREN'T YOUR FANCY FIRE-BREATHING DRAGONS FROM LEGENDS OF OLD. BUT THEY ARE REAL. AND THEY'RE SMELLY.

All right, Komodo dragons don't really kill with their breath but they almost do. Here are the facts:

- a Komodo has bad breath
- the bad breath is caused by over 50 types of bacteria that live in its mouth
- when the dragon bites it leaves behind this bacteria
- if not treated, the bacteria usually kills the prey within 72 hours.

Komodos live in Indonesia, on the islands of Komodo Rinca and Flores, though they do swim and have been known to visit other islands. So if you're on one of these islands and have been bitten it's time to worry. Here's why:

- Komodos will hunt you down - they are very patient. Like other reptiles they don't need to eat very often. They've been known to stay in the same spot for days waiting for their prey

- they're not scared of humans
- they're BIG! They can grow up to 3m long and weigh 100kg. They're the largest lizards in the world
- they can smell rotting flesh from miles off.

Of course if you're bitten, you might not be killed by infections caused by the bacteria. You could be killed by other means.

A Komodo's first bite, (which will usually be on the leg, it being a short creature), might actually bring you down. Here's what could happen then:

- it could rip into you with its teeth, which are up to 17mm long and serrated like a carving knife

FAST FACTS

NAME: Komodo dragon, locals call it Ora
LIVES: Indonesian Islands
EATS: Meat. Will also eat rotting meat and bones REPRODUCES: Females lay 20 to 40 eggs in a nest in the ground. After about 8 months, 40cm long young hatch and have to fend for themselves.

ath

- it could tear you with its claws, which are driven by powerful leg muscles

- it could rip off and swallow large chunks of meat - it's able to open its jaws unusually wide

- it could eat all of you in one hit. Very, very quickly.

An adult Komodo can eat a staggering 80 per cent of its body weight in a single meal. An adult male weighs up to 100kg. That means it could eat an 80kg person in one sitting. And they eat fast. A small female of only 50kg was recorded eating a 17kg boar in 17 minutes.

Terry Boylan is a Senior Herpetofauna keeper at Taronga Zoo in Sydney. He looks after a male Komodo, named Tuka,

“A Komodo can eat up to 80 per cent of its body weight in a single meal” from the island off Flores. Terry has visited Komodo and seen plenty of dragons. Here's what Terry says about them:

- “Komodos are so sure of themselves they'll just stand their ground

- If you go too close to them they'll arch their backs and walk stiffly on their legs. It's quite frightening to see

- If you don't move away, the next thing they'll do is give a short charge and if you're still in the way, they'll fight.

That's the most amazing thing, they're just completely fearless.”

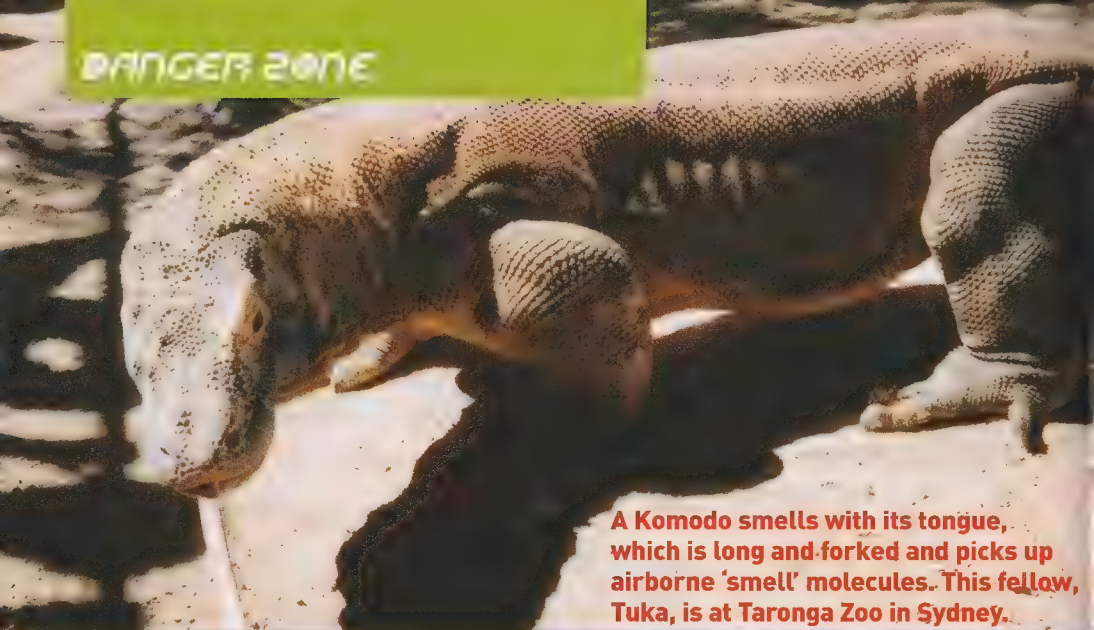

Like mythical

dragons, Komodos are covered in scales.

Embedded beneath the scales are tiny pieces of bone called osteoderms. Crocodiles have these too. But why do they need this protection? They are, after all, the top predator on these islands.

Komodos are solitary creatures. But

A Komodo smells with its tongue, which is long and forked and picks up airborne 'smell' molecules. This fellow, Tuka, is at Taronga Zoo in Sydney.

sometimes they meet – say over a particularly yummy carcass – and then things get a little crazy. Here's why one Komodo might attack another:

- Male Komodos fight each other over the females. Using their tails for support, they wrestle in an upright position. Sooner or later blood is drawn

- Males often bite the females when they are mating, which occurs between May and August
- Older Komodos eat – or cannibalise – younger Komodos.

Scientists are very interested in the Komodo's blood. That's because, despite getting bitten by other Komodo's with all their nasty bacteria, they don't die like other creatures. So scientists suspect that they might have special antibodies, which fight disease, in their blood, and these might be of use to humans.

And yes, Komodos have eaten humans in the past. But you don't need to worry about that. Here's why:

- Komodos

aren't native to Australia so you're not likely to run into one

- The islands they live on are very remote, so if you're going to them, you'll be prepared to meet Komodos

- If you do bump into one you can RUN away.

Komodos can only run at 20km/hour over a few metres – you could easily beat them

And if you do meet one, count yourself as lucky.

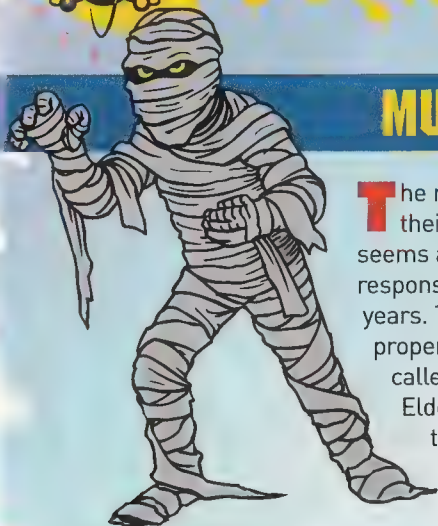

Komodos are endangered, there are only 5,000 left in the world. So who cares if they have bad breath? It's one of the things that makes them unique. Now if you had bad breath ... well that would be another story.

If you'd like to find out more about Komodo dragons then grab this fabulous book, Zoo Album. It's full of great facts and beautiful illustrations – including the one shown on the previous page.

WEIRD SCIENCE

MUMMY MYSTERY SOLVED

The mystery of how the Ancient Egyptians mummified their dead has at last been solved by scientists. It seems a mixture made with sap from the cedar tree was responsible for preserving the dead bodies for thousands of years. The chemists decided to investigate the cedar's properties when they read about an embalming ointment called cedrium in a work by an ancient Roman, Pliny the Elder. As well as carrying out a chemical analysis, they tested the cedar mixtures on pork ribs – that's one meal we won't be eating!

WATERING THE MOBILE

obile phones that run on water? That's what scientists are talking about since they've discovered a new method of generating electrical power. By pumping water through tiny glass tubes, scientists were able to power a light bulb. The glass container took on a tiny electric charge and the water took on the opposite charge. Scientists are excited because most of our electricity is generated from fuels that are running out and are environmentally unfriendly.

To infinity - and beyond!

27 years ago Voyager 1 was launched into space. Now it's the most distant man-made object from Earth and is at the outer limits of the Solar System, a mere 13.5 billion kilometres away. It carries greetings in 55 languages and pictures showing life on Earth. The technology carrying the greetings – a golden gramophone record – is already outdated by Earth standards. But with the nearest solar system another 40,000 years away, we expect it to be totally outdated by the time it reaches anything else. Given the spacecraft was only meant to survive five years in space it's doing pretty well.

how to scrape

why would you scrape your tongue? because you have bumbreath that's why! dr karl kruszelnicki told us all about it when we discussed his new book bumbreath botox and bubbles.

D MAG: What is a greater threat to mankind - botox or bumbreath?

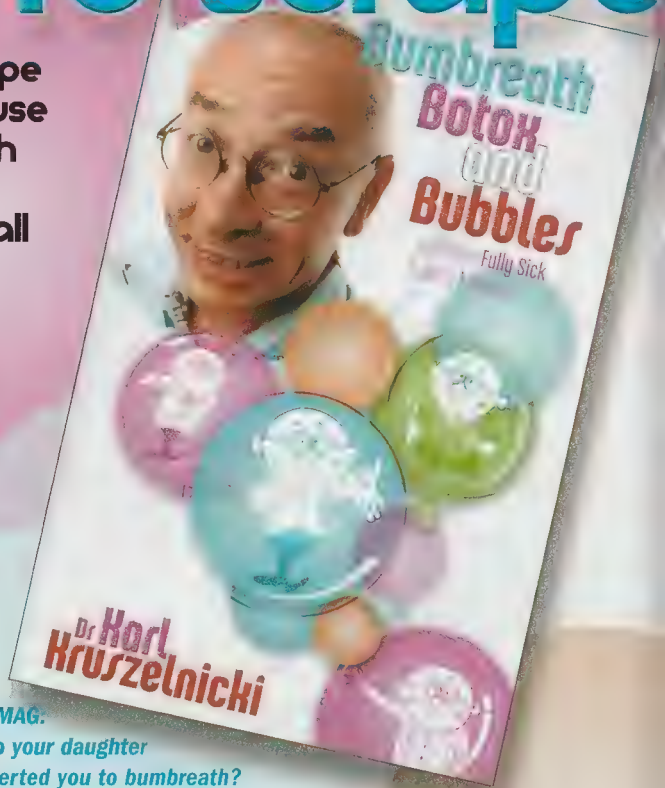

Dr Karl: Well on one hand botox is probably one of the most potent neuro-toxins ever developed and it's amazing you can squirt it into people's faces and it doesn't kill them ...! botox kills lots of people via food poisoning... but bum breath probably effects the happiness of the world more.

D MAG: So your daughter alerted you to bumbreath?

Dr Karl: Yes when she came into the bed and said 'hey dad you smell like a bum...'

It's not just me it's every human being on the planet because we all generate 1-1.5 litres of saliva during the day. This saliva slows down during the night and then the bacteria on your tongue grow like crazy and they generate lots of chemicals. There are three main ones, and they almost qualify as weapons of mass destruction. When they started working with them they found your tongue

they couldn't collect them in glass because they ate through glass - you need a pretty industrial grade chemical to eat through glass!

DMAG: Is there a cure to bumbreath?

Dr Karl: The cure is easy. All you have to do is brush your tongue. Brushing your teeth is good for your teeth but it does nothing for bumbreath. You have to brush your tongue for about a minute a day when you get up and before you go to bed. All you have to use is water. You have to physically remove the bacteria.

DMAG: We have a page in DMAG called So Gross and readers send in their questions - one of the main ones is 'why is poo brown'?

Dr Karl: Why is poo brown? That's really weird isn't it because food comes in green, white, yellow - but always

WHO IS DR KARL?

Dr Karl used to be a scientist, engineer and doctor. Now he's our fave science guru - you can hear him on radio, read one of his great books or checkout his website www.abc.net.au/science/k2.

DR KARL'S PREDICTIONS

These are what Dr Karl predicts will happen in the lifetimes of the kids reading DMAG:

- 1) Computers will get so small that all of the information generated in the entire history of the human will be able to be stored in something smaller than a grain of sand.
- 2) The kids who are reading this today will be the first generation to live forever ... they will live for 500 to 5,000 in a healthy 8 to 25 year old body ... and they will be in good health for all that time.
- 3) We will have a better way of getting into space, the way we get into space now, sucks. What they do is get a metal cylinder, they fill it with explosives, they put the human beings at the pointy end, they light the wick and if it doesn't explode, eight minutes later they're into space. It has a failure rate of about one per cent - not very good. To get into orbit, they burn about 3,000 tonnes of fuel and then when they come back they waste all that energy as heat. Wouldn't it be nice to work out how to store that energy, not as heat but in some sort of battery and then to use that energy to lift you up next time?
- 4) We'll do amazing things in engineering as we learn to marry the very small with the very large ... There are nanofibres, nanotubes that are incredibly strong and we can grow them using DNA technology. So our knowledge of genetics will help us make very small structures to put together to make very big structures. So for instance we could put together a ladder to take us into space.

comes out brown or black. The reason is because it is filled with broken down red blood cells, which have a life of about 120 days. Most things in your body are recycled, but some things can't be. The liver and the gall bladder take some of those things out and one is the dye that makes faeces brown.

SEARCHING FOR SANTA

EVER FANCIED A TRIP TO THE NORTH
POLE? ERIC PHILIPS
HAS BEEN DREAMING
ABOUT IT SINCE HE

WAS A KID. AT 40 HE DID IT. WE ASKED HIM
ALL ABOUT IT.

DMAG: Why did you go on this expedition?

ERIC: I went because I have a passion for and interest in ice-adventuring. I didn't have much experience in travelling on pack ice (frozen sea) and a walk across the frozen Arctic Ocean to the North Pole seemed like a good way of learning about it.

DMAG: What was the highlight?

ERIC: The highlight was the first couple of weeks of the expedition, when the very low sun (almost like a permanent sunset) washed the ice with beautiful colours and shadows.

DMAG: How did you feel when you saw a polar bear?

ERIC: Jon and I were both very frightened at first because polar bears are the largest land-living carnivore on the planet. That means, BIG, MEAT EATING and HUNGRY. Once we settled down and prepared ourselves with things to scare it away we relaxed and watched it with a great deal of nervous interest. It came very close but we managed to frighten it. It was an amazing experience, both scary and enriching.

DMAG: What other wildlife did you see?

ERIC: We saw about six seals during the trip, usually only their heads poking through a crack in the ice, and some birds.

Oh, and Jon is pretty wild too!

DMAG: Describe a typical day...

ERIC: Wake up at 5am (groan!) and poke my head and arms out of the sleeping up, it makes a bag. Look at the thermometer (usually around -30 degrees C) then light the stove and put a pot of iceblocks on it to melt water. Say 'good morning' to Jon then pour hot water from a thermos (prepared the previous night) for coffee. Check the GPS for our position and see sleds/kayaks. Let's say it's Day 45. We clip into the harness, check our compass for direction, then start pulling our sleds across the ice towards the North Pole for four hours, without a rest, eating pig fat which we keep in our pockets.

WHERE DID THEY GO?

Eric Philips and Jon Muir trekked almost 1000km to reach the Geographic North Pole. The thick ice covering the North Pole overlies the 3000m deep waters of the Arctic Ocean - so you wouldn't want to fall through it!

We have 20 minutes break and cram in as much food and drink as we can. Then another four hours, 20 minutes break, another four hours. On the way we deal with pressure ridges, lanes of open water called leads, numb or frozen fingers and toes, and ice sticking to our eye-lashes. Find a suitable campsite behind an iceblock, set up camp, crawl in, get in our sleeping bags, light the stove, check our position, cook and eat dinner, chat away if we feel like it, write in our diaries, then crawl into our sleeping bags, close the hood above our heads and sleeeeeeeeeeeep. Then do it all again the next day, and the next, and the next...

DMAG: How did you go to the toilet?

ERIC: Boys have it easy I guess. In our sleeping bags we have a pee bottle, which, after you fill it up, makes a good hot water bottle. Number two's are more difficult. We go outside and have everything prepared - location, zips, toilet paper - then do it AS FAST AS POSSIBLE!

DMAG: How did you get around?

ERIC: We used skis on our feet or just walked in boots when the surface was firm, towing our sleds like trailers. Sometimes we used our sleds as kayaks to paddle across leads of water. That was scary but effective.

DMAG: How far would you travel each day?

ERIC: We averaged about 20km a day, our best day was nearly 40km, our worst day, about 3km.

DMAG: What was the hardest part?

ERIC: The hardest part was coping with the cold. I got frostbite on my fingers on Day 19 and had to live with that for another 41 days before we reached the Pole.

DMAG: Did you ever feel like quitting?

ERIC: We never thought of quitting but we did realise that at times we might not make it and that we had to move faster.

DMAG: What went through your mind when Jon fell through the ice?

ERIC: I did think there was a chance that he could drown because he had skis strapped to his feet and poles on his hands. His face was a picture of terror and I still see that face in my mind now. I threw him a rope and he grabbed it and lunged through the ice to

DID YOU KNOW

The Geographic North Pole, which is a fixed point used for drawing maps, is 900km from the Magnetic North Pole, which is where the magnetic field is vertically downwards.

No sign of a polar bear - though they did see one later in the trip.

the edge where I was standing. I hauled him out then we quickly camped to dry out. It took three days.

DMAG: You took a lot of equipment - in hindsight was there anything you could have left behind?

ERIC: We could have left our kites behind. We had intended to use them to pull us across the ice, as I have done in Greenland, Antarctica and Patagonia, but it didn't work out this time.

DMAG: Or anything else you would have taken?

ERIC: More chocolate!

DMAG: The food you took was full of fat - why?

ERIC: Fat provides you with the most calories or kilojoules per gram, and calories give you energy to move and stay warm. We needed over 7500 calories each per day, that's the equivalent of more than two bottles of olive oil every day.

DMAG: How did you stomach all that fat?

ERIC: It was difficult to get used to the fat, but we slowly did. Everything that came out of our bodies was very oily (you get what I mean).

DMAG: How did you get back from the North Pole?

ERIC: We were picked up by helicopter and taken to a floating base station where we then flew on a plane back to Siberia, then Moscow, then home.

DMAG: Are you planning another adventure?

ERIC: I am planning more adventures. Back to Antarctica, to Russia, anywhere where there is lots of ice.

DMAG: What skills do you need to go on an adventure like yours?

ERIC: Here are the top five elements you need for any adventure:

1. Clarity. Having a clear understanding of why you want to go and how to go about it.
2. Creativity. The ability to apply your skills, improvise and solve problems.
3. Conviction. A firm belief that it can be done, particularly when nothing seems to be going right.
4. Cooperation. Working as a team.
5. Conservatism. Minimising the risk and understanding that life is more important than success.

DMAG: As a kid did you dream about this sort of thing?

ERIC: I dreamed of this sort of thing ever since I could remember dreams. I dreamed of white wildernesses and challenging adventures.

DMAG: Was there any sign of Santa?

ERIC: I had asked Santa for a freezer for Christmas and figured I could save him the delivery by collecting it, but never found him. He was probably still sleeping after the busy Christmas season. I'm sure he's out there, somewhere...

SUMMER SINGE

By Angie Hubbard

BLACK PRINCE, DOUBLE
DRUMMER, FLOURY BAKER,
GREENGROCER
... DO THESE NAMES SOUND FAMILIAR?

Cicadas are so fascinating that initially it was children who gave them their nicknames, and as a result they probably have the most colourful common names in the insect world. For years kids have climbed trees to find cicadas for pets, because they are considered harmless. But one thing cicadas can irritate is your ears.

Let's get loud

Cicadas are the loudest insects in the world, and surprisingly, while you're blocking your ears, they're blocking theirs too. When a male sings, it crosses its tympana (the ear-like part) so that it won't be deafened by its own noise.

The somewhat annoying song is a mating call made only by male cicadas to attract females.

Their song is also often heard in chorus, which frightens birds and other predators, and makes it difficult for them to locate a single cicada.

But their singing isn't heard for long, as cicadas only live a few weeks above the ground.

An underground life

An adult female cicada lays about 500 eggs into plant stems that she pierces with her ovipositor (egg-laying spike at the tip of the abdomen). The eggs hatch into small, wingless cicadas, which are known as nymphs. These

CROSS

Have you ever felt drops of rain on a very sunny day? Don't worry you haven't gone crazy, it was probably a cicada going to the toilet. They squirt out a clear watery waste when they feed.

As the nymphs dig ground and burrow, they live on sap from plant roots for around six or seven years. It is around this time of year that cicadas begin to surface. When the nymph reaches its full size it digs its way to the surface with its front legs that are specially made for digging. It generally surfaces about nightfall in late spring or early summer. The nymph then climbs onto the trunk of a tree where it sheds its skin for the last time, revealing a fully winged adult cicada.

Eyes for you

As well as having good voices, cicadas also have very good eyesight. They have large compound eyes, situated on the side of their heads, that allow them to see both left and right at the same time. They are also sensory well at night. On top of their head they have three small telescopic eyes that allow them to see above their forehead. So perhaps their names should be a little more apt. Why not come up with your own funky names for them?

As its newly opened wings dry, a greengrocer cicada hangs from the tree, it has just come out of

What you need

Drinking Straws, a pair of scissors and an adult to help you.

What to do

Flatten the end of one of the straws. Ask your adult helper to cut the two corners of the flattened straw to make a sharp point, just like an upside down V.

Put this pointed end of the straw in you mouth, press your lips gently together and blow. It might take a bit of practise to get a sound but keep trying. You have just made your own musical instrument!

Take some more straws and

You can go wild with your own musical tunes just like your favourite Nickelodeon stars will be going wild to their toons in an all-new show 'Nick Toons Live' at Dreamworld this Christmas.

get your adult helper to make the same upside down V shape. Also get your helper to cut each of the straws shorter. Play each straw and compare the sound of the short straw to the long straw.

What's happening?

The pointy upside down V shape acts like a reed. Musical instruments that you might have seen with a reed include a clarinet or an oboe. When you blow on the 'reed' it vibrates which in turn vibrates the column of air in the straw. We hear this vibrating air as sound. A shorter straw has a shorter column of air to vibrate which means shorter wavelengths and therefore higher pitch in sound.

Beep beep!

THE ROADRUNNER - IS IT A BRIGHT BLUE BIRD THAT GOES 'BEEP, BEEP'? DOES IT MOVE SO FAST ITS LEGS ARE A BLUR? IS IT ABLE TO OUTWIT THE SMARTEST COYOTE? IN CARTOON LAND IT CAN. IN REAL LIFE IT'S A BIT DIFFERENT AS DMAG FOUND OUT...

Yes roadrunners do exist. They live in the deserts of Mexico and south-western US. They're quite a bit smaller than the cartoon birds though, growing to 30cm high. And they're not blue - they're mottled brown, black and white birds.

But they do run very fast. So fast that their legs appear as a blur - just like in the cartoons. They've been clocked at 30km per hour, which isn't bad for something so short. And they do run along - or beside - the road in a comical gait.

Roadrunners run fast but they can't fly. They'll spread their short wings and make a few jumps, or glide down from a cactus but that's about it.

SNAKE EATER

The roadrunner eats insects, spiders, lizards, small mammals and

FAST FACTS

NAME: Roadrunner
LIVES: Deserts of Mexico and south-western US
WEIGHT: Up to 600 grams

LENGTH: Up to 40cm
EATS: Insects, lizards, small mammals, snakes
LIFESPAN: 7-8 years
OFFSPRING: 2-12 eggs laid once or twice a year. Only 3-4 chicks usually survive.

Meet the real roadrunner... and yes, they do run along roads.

DID YOU KNOW

If the snake the roadrunner has caught is too long, it will swallow as much of the snake as it can and leave the rest dangling out of its mouth as it walks around. Over the next few hours the roadrunner will slowly swallow the snake as it digests it.

snakes – including the deadly rattlesnake, which hardly any other creature eats. It snaps up coiled rattlesnakes by the tail and then repeatedly slams the snake's head on the ground until it is dead.

Most of the bird's day is spent foraging for food and avoiding being food. And despite what we see in the cartoons, it isn't on the coyote's menu. It's just too fast and too small for a coyote to bother with.

SAME SHAPE DIFFERENT SOUND

Like the cartoon bird, it has a long tail and a head crest, which it moves up and down. And it does have quite a long beak, which it uses to snap up its prey.

Its legs aren't quite the proportions shown in the cartoon though. The cartoon version looks like it might be related to an ostrich, but the real bird is a member of the cuckoo family.

And while the cartoon roadrunner makes a trademark 'beep, beep!' that sounds like a car horn, the real version makes six to eight, low, dove-like coos.

So even though it's not quite as depicted in the cartoons, the real roadrunner is quite an interesting bird. Maybe you'll see one in your travels!

SO GROSS!

WHAT IS DANDRUFF MADE OF?

Dandruff is made up of dead skin cells, oil and sometimes dirt. Millions of skin cells are shed every day from all over your body, even from your scalp. You also have oil-making glands at the base of the hair follicles on your scalp. Sometimes these glands get aggravated and make too much oil. This can cause the skin flakes to clump together to form white flakes or 'dandruff'. Everyone has dandruff to some degree. It can be aggravated by not washing enough or washing too much, by stress or by infections. But the main thing to know is that it is not contagious.

Question from Sarah Siebenhausen, Qld.

WHY DO COWS REGURGITATE THEIR FOOD?

Cows regurgitate – or spew up and re-swallow – their food in order to digest it. Humans can't digest grass but cows, thanks to their four stomachs and their spewing trick, can. When the grass is swallowed it goes into a chamber (one of the four 'stomachs') where it is mixed with bacteria. Then it moves to another area where the bacteria grows rapidly, feeding on the grass. Hours later, the cow regurgitates the mixture, called cud, chews it for a while, and then swallows it again, diverting it into the third then fourth chambers. All this is so it can break down the proteins and carbohydrates in the grass. But most of what it ends up eating is bacteria.

Question from April Prime, NT

DO BIRDS WEE?

They do and they don't. Unlike most other animals, a bird wees – or urinates – through the same opening that poo – or faeces – comes out of. This means that things can get mixed up a bit. Also, bird droppings have a third component called urates, which is a cream-coloured waste product produced in the kidneys. So the white part of bird droppings is urates, the brown part is faeces and the liquid part is wee.

Pearlie in the Park

IS WENDY HARMER OFF WITH THE FAIRIES NOW SHE'S WRITING ABOUT THEM? HER NEW BOOK PEARLIE IN THE PARK IS PRETTY OUT THERE - BUT IS WENDY? DECIDE FOR YOURSELF...

DMAG: We think Pearlie the fairy might be a bit like you. Is your house a mess like hers?

WENDY: Yes I am very messy like Pearlie, I try to keep the rest of my shell tidy but the bedroom part of my shell is very messy. She is like me - she's a bit bossy and likes everything to be in order.

DMAG: Do you have a thing for pearls?

WENDY: I do actually!

DMAG: Are you also into pink sparkley things?

WENDY: No but I have a daughter who's very much into pink sparkley things.

DMAG: So was this book written for your daughter Maeve?

WENDY: No, this is a first reader so it's written for girls who are 6 to 8. It's designed to be the first book they can read by themselves.

DMAG: What was the first book you read by yourself?

WENDY: Gosh - I can't remember. I started to read when I was very young. The first book that I loved though was Enid Blyton's The Magic Faraway Tree. So I wanted this book to have a real sense of adventure and fantasy. The book came about because I think a lot of modern fairies are a bit boring. They sit around and do their hair and get frocks for the ball ... they don't do anything, they never have any adventures. Fairies in the old days were real characters, they were really scary - they would steal babies and trick you and that sort of thing.

DMAG: Did you believe in fairies as a kid?

WENDY: Not as a kid. I didn't believe in them until I was about 15, I lived out in the country - I was a bit of a slow learner (laughing). I used to stay at my Grandma's house and there was a Brownie that lived behind the curtains in the bedroom that I spent many years looking for. I loved fairies, I really did. Pearlie's an Aussie fairy and she's a bit of a greenie.

DMAG: Pearlie also has some colourful sayings - 'Reeds and ripples, roots and twigs' - do you ever use any of these yourself?

WENDY: No - I won't tell you what I usually say.

DMAG: Are you doing a second book?

WENDY: Yes, it's called Pearlie and the Big Doll. Pearlie finds a doll left in the park ...without saying too much it involves the two rats doing a stand up comedy routine. The third one is about when Pearlie's cousin comes down from Lightning Ridge, her name's Opal, she's a bit like Steve Irwin in a tutu. She says 'Oh, starve the lizards, stone the crows, crikey!' She's a real ocker fairy, I'm having a lot of fun with the Australian culture - I just love the Australian language.

DMAG: Did you work closely with the illustrator?

WENDY: Yes. Mark drew her and I saw her and said - there she is! I think she's a bit like Powerpuff Girls meet Tinkerbell in her look and she's also a bit like a Jetson.

DMAG: So what tips do you have for kids who want to write books?

WENDY: The language should sound great when it's read out loud.

Personally I like my moral lessons hidden. You know, in The Faraway Tree there wasn't a lot of moralising, there was adventure.

DMAG: You're also a comedian and a radio co-host - what's been the highlight of your career?

WENDY: One of the best things happened in 1993. I took a show to the Edinburgh Festival and it was transferred to the West End in London, it was only a week but that was pretty cool. But the highlight is being able to have ideas and make them a reality. It's just fabulous.

THE AMULET OF SAMARKAND

The Bartimaeus Trilogy

By Jonathan Stroud

IS THIS BOOK HOTTER THAN POTTER? WE THINK SO.
HERE'S A SNEAK PEEK...

The sulphur cloud contracted into a thick column of smoke that vomited forth thin tendrils: they licked the air like tongues before withdrawing. The column hung above the middle of the pentacle, bubbling ever upwards against the ceiling like the cloud of an erupting volcano. There was a barely perceptible pause. Then two yellow staring eyes materialised in the heart of the smoke.

Hey, it was his first time. I wanted to scare him.

And I did too. The dark-haired boy stood in a pentacle of his own, smaller, filled with different runes, a metre away from one main one. He was pale as a corpse, shaking like a dead leaf in a high wind. His teeth rattled in his quivering jaw. Beads of sweat dripped from his brow, turning to ice as they fell through the air. They twinkled with the sound of hailstones to the floor.

Ah well and good, but so what? I mean, he looked about twelve years old. Wide-eyed, hollow-cheeked. There's not that much satisfaction to be had from scaring the pants off a scrawny kid.

So I floated and waited, hoping he wasn't going to take too long to get round to the dismissing spell. To keep myself occupied I made blue flames lick up around the inner edges of the pentacle, as if they were seeking a way to get out and nab him. All hokum, of course.

I'd already checked and the seal was drawn well enough. No spelling mistakes anywhere, unfortunately.

At last it looked as if the urchin was plucking up the courage to speak. I guessed this by a stammering about his lips that didn't seem to be induced by pure fear alone. I let the blue fire die away to be replaced by a foul smell.

The kid spoke. Very squeakily.

'I charge you . . . to . . . to . . . Get on with it! 't-t-tell me your n-name.'

That's usually how they start, the young ones. Meaningless waffle. He knew and I knew that he knew my name already: otherwise how could he have summoned me in the first place? You need the right choice of words, the right actions and most of all the right name. I mean, it's not like hailing a cab - you don't get just anybody when you call.

I chose a rich, deep, dark chocolatey sort of voice, the kind that resounds from everywhere and nowhere and makes the hairs stand up on the back of inexperienced necks.

'BARTIMAEUS.'

I saw the kid give me a strangled kind of gulp when he heard the word. Good - he wasn't entirely stupid then: he knew who and what I was. He knew my reputation.

After taking a moment to swallow some accumulated phlegm he spoke again. 'I-I charge you again to answer. Are you that B-Bartimaeus who in olden times was summoned by the magicians to repair the walls of Prague?'

What a time-waster this kid was. Who else would it be? I upped the volume a bit on this one. The ice on the light bulbs cracked like a caramelised sugar. Behind the dirty curtains the window glass shimmered and hummed. The kid rocked back on his heels.

'I am Bartimaeus! I am Sakhr al-Jinni, N'gorso the Mighty and Serpent of Silver Plumes! I have rebuilt the walls of Uruk, Karnak and Prague. I have spoken with Solomon. I have run with the buffalo fathers of the plains. I have watched over Old Zimbabwe till the stones fell and the jackals fed on its people. I am Bartimaeus! I recognise no master. So I charge you in your turn, boy. Who are you to summon me?'

Impressive stuff, eh? All true as well, which gives it more power. And I wasn't just doing it to sound big. I rather hoped the kid would be blustered by it into telling me his name in return, which would give me something to go on when his back was turned. But no luck there.

'By the constraints of the circle, the points on the pentacle and the chain of runes, I am your master! You will obey my will!'

There was something particularly obnoxious about hearing this old shtick coming from a weedy stripling, and in such a rubbish high voice too. I bit back the temptation to give him a piece of my mind and intoned the usual response. Anything to get it over with quickly.

'What is your will?'

I admit I was already surprised. Most tyro magicians look first and ask questions later. They go window-shopping, eyeing up their potential power, but being far too nervous to try it out. You don't often get small ones like this squirt calling up entities like me in the first place, either.

The kid cleared his throat. This was the moment. This is what he'd been building up to. He'd been dreaming of this for years, when he should have been lying on his bed thinking about racing cars or girls. I waited grimly for the pathetic request. What would it be?

THE SLIPPERY SLOPE

By Lemony Snicket

The Series of Unfortunate Events we've come to know and dread from Lemony Snicket is now up to book ten. It starts with Violet and Klaus careering to their deaths in an unhitched caravan. It ends - well if you must know, Violet and Klaus do not die. And the youngest Baudelaire is actually growing up - though she still can't speak properly she can cook, which is where the mysterious casserole dish comes in. Will the Baudelaire orphans finally discover which parent survived the fire? And will they work out what VFD stands for? Find out - or not - in this strangely compelling book.

OLIVIA KIDNEY

By Ellen Potter

Olivia has just moved into a huge apartment block in New York. Her dad's the caretaker there. Problem is, he's disappeared. As Olivia searches for him she meets some very strange people - like the old lady whose apartment is made of glass so she can see into the unit below her, or Sidi, who wears a coat made of live lizards. Then there are the lizards - do they really say 'hey, buster'? Maybe Olivia is a little mad herself - after all, she has dealt with some very traumatic events recently. This book is wonderful!

CAPTAIN UNDERPANTS AND THE BIG, BAD BATTLE OF THE BIONIC BOOGER BOY

By Dav Pilkey

Meet Bionic Booger Boy, previously known as snotty school brainiac

Melvin. When Melvin turns Sulu his pet into a bionic super-hamster, he realises the potential of his new invention and decides to make himself bionic. Only his experiment fails, largely due to some nasty nostril nuggets. Full of gross encounters and flip-o-ramas depicting gross violence, this book is so gross it's SNOT funny! We loved it.

TOAD AWAY

By Morris Gleitzman

Limpy the cane toad has a vision. He wants a world where humans play happily with toads – maybe sharing a mudslide, some maggot moisturiser or a dollop of slug sauce. But in Australia, cane toads are pests. So Limpy, his sister and his cousin Goliath, head to the Amazon jungle of South America, the cane toads' natural habitat. Maybe cane toads live peacefully with humans there he thinks. Meanwhile Goliath, having declared war on the human race, is peeing on everything humans eat or drink. Will Limpy's quest be successful? Dragonkeeper

by Carole Wilkinson

A TELEPATHIC DRAGON
AND A SLAVE GIRL IN ANCIENT CHINA - WE'D LIKE YOU TO MEET THEM
BOTH IN THIS WONDERFUL EXTRACT

The dragon inclined his head. He was watching her carefully, assessing her reactions. How could she have been stupid enough to think he was an animal no more intelligent than an ox or a goat?

"Why didn't I ever hear you before?"

"Never spoke."

The girl watched as the creature carefully picked up one of the mushrooms. The inner talons on each paw could bend towards each other, just like a finger and thumb. He placed the mushroom in his mouth.

"Do you have a name, dragon?"

The creature made more metallic

sounds. In her mind she heard the dragon's voice. "Everyone has name."

Hua scurried back from his search for food, attracted by the smell of cooking meat. He stopped dead when he saw the dragon staring down at him.

"Even rat has name."

"I don't," replied the girl.

"Do." The word echoed around inside her mind.

Hua scabbled up her clothing and into her jacket. She looked into the dragon's

eyes. "How do you know?"

The creature reached out a paw and extended one of his talons towards her neck. The girl shrank back. Hua burrowed under her armpit. The talon was razor-sharp and could have cut her throat as easily as the Emperor's kitchen hands sliced beef.

"Do not be afraid," said the dragon voice.

The dragon's talon flicked out the bamboo square that hung around her neck. The girl looked down at the character

that was carved into the bamboo. It was almost worn away.

"What does it say?" Her voice was just a whisper.

"Ping," the dragon voice said.

"Is that my name?"

The dragon inclined his head again.

"Ping," the slave girl repeated.

"Parents gave you this name," said the dragon.

Tears filled Ping's eyes as she said her name over and over again. Many people had two names.

Some important people even had three. She was happy to finally have one.

"Thank you for giving me my name." She reached out and scratched the dragon in the soft spot under his chin.

"You didn't tell me your name, dragon," she said, wiping her eyes.

"Lived for long, long time," the dragon replied.

"Had many names—Da Lu

which means Great

Green; Dai Yu, Bringer of Rain; Lao Tang, Old

Dignified One. Real name is Long Danzi—

Courageous Dragon."

"I'll call you Danzi, then," said Ping. "You are very courageous."

"What does my name

mean?" she asked.

"Duckweed," replied the dragon.

"Oh," said Ping, but she was only disappointed for a second. It might not be an elegant name,

but she had a name, a gift from her long-gone parents and it was hers alone.

While Ping was lost in her thoughts, the dragon rolled the purple stone

out of the cave into the light. He turned it over with one taloned paw, examining it carefully.

"Stone undamaged," he said.

Ping looked at the stone.

"I'm not sure why you're so concerned about that stone," she said. "You were almost caught by the dragon hunter."

"Ping risked life for rat."

"Hua's my best friend,"

Ping replied. "I had to go back for him, but I don't see any sense in risking your life for a rock." The voice in Ping's mind was silent.

"You've escaped though,"

she said. "You're free at last. Now I have to get back to Huangling."

The dragon turned to look at her.

"Why return?"

Ping hadn't considered

doing anything else. She had lived on Huangling for as long as she could remember. She couldn't imagine a life in any other place. "Where else would I go?"

"Could find new place." Ping shook her head. Just the thought of going out into the world terrified her. "I have work to do at Huangling. I won't have you to look after any more, but the oxen, the goat, the pigs and the chickens still need feeding, and if the Emperor is going to visit

Huangling from time to time, Lao Ma will need help keeping the palace clean," replied Ping. Danzi's bright eyes narrowed. "Ping must not go back."

She smiled, pleased that the dragon was concerned about her safety.

"Master Lan has been arrested. Once the Emperor has gone back to Chang'an, it'll be safe for me to go back. I'll be punished, but then I can go back to work. You can stay here."

"Danzi not staying here," he said. "Going to Ocean." "Ocean?" said Ping. "Ocean is just a place in stories, like the Kunlun Mountains and the Isle of the Blest. Lao Ma told me stories about them. They're pretend."

"All exist."

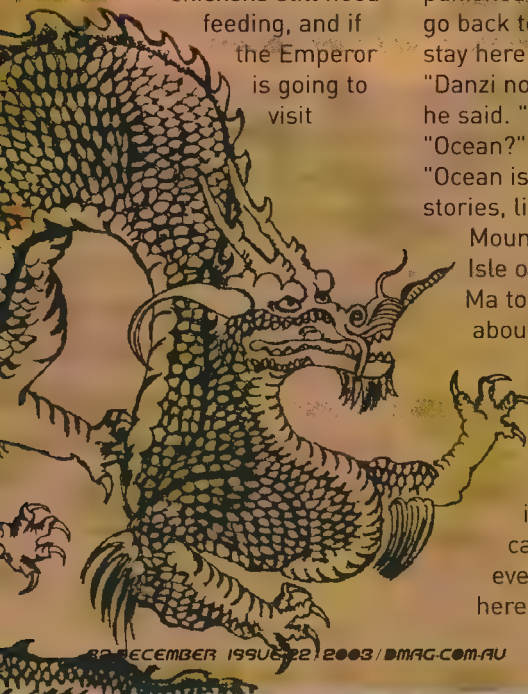

"Why would you want to go anywhere? This is a comfortable cave. You have everything you want here and the dragon hunter won't be able to find you. I'll come and visit you when I can." "Danzi growing old. Waters of Ocean have magical powers, will renew strength." Ping was beginning to wonder if being locked up for so many years had affected the dragon's mind.

"Ping must help Danzi," he said.

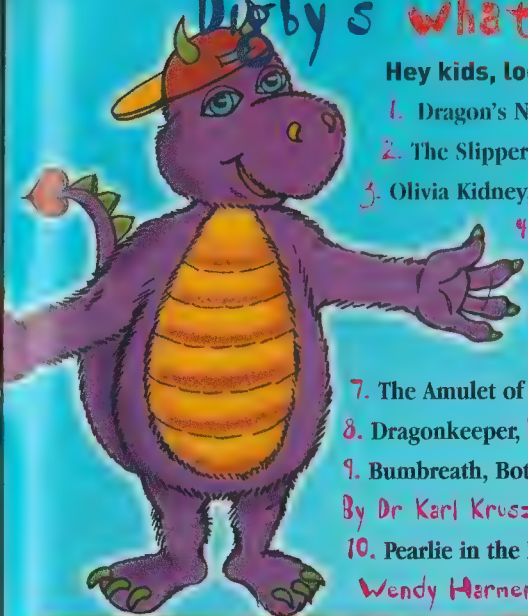

Ping stared at the dragon. "What do you mean?" "Travel with Danzi to Ocean."

Lesson From Beyond the Sea

This was a sunny day on the Great Barrier Reef. As two turtles peered up they saw a fishing boat lowering a net towards them. They swam away to the turtles. They told them all about what happened. "I've got an idea," announced the Grand Turtle, who was the oldest and wisest of the turtles. "We can get back at those humans, who steal our shells and feed us plastic bags!"

"I've got a plan", said the Grand Turtle. "Everyone brainstorm and we'll meet here in an hour."

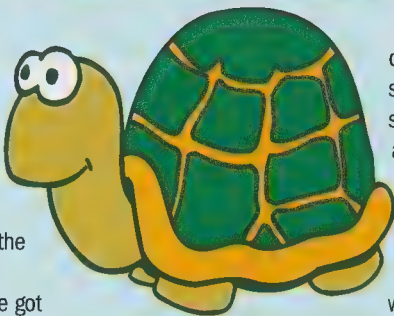

One hour later the reef was echoing with the sounds of the turtles chatting. "Quiet! Can I have every turtles attention," ordered the Grand Turtle. "Take turns to talk, please."

"I think we should trap the humans in nets," suggested Rowena Turtle.

"Since the frogs and toads are helping us, I'm sure the toads would like to flatten humans like they squish the toads with their vehicles."

"Good ideas everybody. Tomorrow morning we'll meet at Octopus Cove." The turtles spent the rest of the day making plans.

Early next morning all the turtles met to discuss their plans for getting back at the humans, "We strike today!" declared the Grand Turtle.

"Yeah!!!!" Cheered the turtles. "Let's go forth onto the land of the humans."

The turtles paddled towards the nearest fishing boat they could find. They swam under the boats to the fishing nets and bit the ropes to release the captured fish. They dragged the nets towards the beach. There they were met by the ferocious frogs and terrible toad army. Their plan was to trap the humans in their own nets and to give them a taste of their own medicine. The frogs used their super sticky tongues to glue the nets to the strands of seaweed.

Meanwhile some toads had "borrowed" a golf buggy. They had spent much of the morning learning how to actually drive it. Now they were ready to begin "Operation Squish." The beach was a riot of screams from the sea and sand as people were squashed under the buggy and tangled in nets. The octopus got involved in the action by blinding the humans with ink. The scene captured people's attention Australia wide. The pandemonium reached the front page of the newspapers with headlines like, "Toad Rampage", "Frog Fighters" and "Turtle Thwack."

The humans looked around the sunny beach desperately trying to find the culprits of this horrifying event but all they could see was a sea of green turtles, a mass of green frogs and a blob of brown toads. The people were astonished.

"Surely these creatures could not be responsible? I thought they were harmless, until now" a human screeched.

"I thought they were our friends," added another.

"Friends," huffed the Grand Turtle. "Yeah right. Is that why you trap us in your nets, pollute our water and feed us your disgusting rubbish? Your lesson today humans is treat others how you would like to be treated! Bye for now.... Until your next lesson."

Chumba Chumba

Once, a long time ago in the northern parts of Canada, there was a pack of wolves. There were many wolf packs at this time, but the whisper wolves were the toughest, quietest, quickest and most stealth-like in the whole of North Canada.

One day when the pack leader, Mikancha, was teaching the five new cubs how to get stealthy and kill prey, a bird landed about ten metres away from the smallest cub, Chumba. Chumba was picked on because of his size. He was smaller than the others. Titan was the biggest, then Linka, Tratel, Pinlak then Chumba. Even though he was the smallest and the youngest, Chumba was the stealthiest and had already managed to kill three lizards and two mice. Just as Chumba started getting ready to pounce, Titan, who thought he was the coolest ever, jumped at the small bird. As he landed the bird flew away and Titan tried to grab it in his paw but accidentally hit himself in the face. All the others rolled about in laughter. They thought it was so funny! Even Mikancha chuckled at Titan.

Later that day when Chumba was with his mother Kiche, he spotted another of the small birds that Titan had pounced at. He quickly slipped into the nearest shrub without it noticing. As quick as lightning he lashed out at the bird and before it could fly away he caught his claws in one of its wings pulling it back to earth.

Proudly he carried it back to his mother Kiche and Mikancha. Mikancha was very proud of Chumba because he was the first cub to catch a bird.

The next day when Chumba was walking along looking for more innocent birds to catch, he was confronted by a jealous Titan.

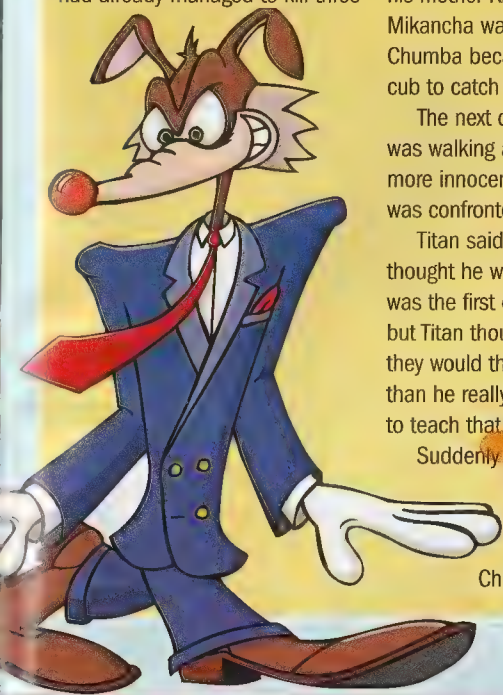

Titan said to Chumba that he thought he was good because he was the first one to catch a bird, but Titan thought he was lying so they would think he was cooler than he really was. He was going to teach that show-off a lesson.

Suddenly Titan sprang at Chumba, and nearly knocked him off his balance. Luckily Chumba was quick and managed to scratch Titan on the neck. It was a critical hit for Titan. Blood poured from the claw marks in Titan's neck. Titan was angry and hurt so he decided to pretend to cower away and run for cover in the bushes and get Chumba as he walked away.

Chumba was glad when Titan whimpered and hid in the bushes, not because he had won, but because he didn't want to fight Titan. He decided to go to the river for a swim and see if he could catch a fish or another bird. As Chumba was walking away, ready to go to the river, Titan leapt out of nowhere and caught Chumba's back right paw. Linka, Pinlak and Tratel came out of the trees just as Chumba got his teeth into Titan's left ear and ripped it to shreds. Linka said angrily that they should stop fighting each other and save their energy to catch some lunch. Pinlak and Tratel agreed. Titan said he was sorry and asked if Chumba could let go of his ear now because it was starting to hurt.

Chumba also apologised. Then Tratel asked them why they were standing around doing nothing when they could be swimming or hunting something to eat for lunch. So with Tratel leading the way the five wolf cubs went to the river for the rest of the day. By Bre-Anne Sandercock, 10

ITEM 3

SMOOTHSKIN ALIENS

ONCE THEY HAVE ALL GATHERED AT THE PARTY, UGLI STEPS IN WITH THE HEAVY ARTILLERY AND DEMANDS THAT THEY BE RECOGNISED AS THE TRUE LEADERS OF CRAZY BONES PLANET.

YOU FORGOT ITEM 4, OTHERWISE KNOWN AS THE 'WACKO CLAUSE'.

THE WACKO CLAUSE?

YOU IDIOT! WE'RE NOT GOING TO THE PARTY!

SPEAK FOR YOURSELF - I WOULDN'T MISS IT FOR THE WORLD!

BUT IF YOU GO YOU'LL BE HELD HOSTAGE ALONG WITH EVERYONE ELSE AT THE PARTY.

OH! MAYBE I'LL TAKE THOSE RED HERRING SANDWICHES TO GO...

YUP!
ITEM 4. MUST ENSURE THAT THE PARTY HAS TONS OF RED HERRING SANDWICHES!! HEHEHE, THEY'RE MY FAVOURITE!

HEY WACK-JOB, HAVE YOU HEARD ABOUT THE B.G. CLAUSE? IT HAS SANDWICHES TOO.

REALLY? WHAT KIND?

KNUCKLE!

EVEN AS A CLONE YOU FALL FOR IT EVERY TIME! C'MON GUYS, LET'S GET THIS UGLI PLAN INTO ACTION.

MEANWHILE, IN THE MAZE OF DOOM...

YOU SEE, THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY OUT OF THIS MAZE, BUT THAT WAY IS CONSTANTLY CHANGING...

SO EVEN WHEN YOU THINK YOU'VE FOUND IT...

IT CHANGES AGAIN! I THINK IT'S QUITE INGENIOUS.

BUT THAT MEANS WE'RE ALL GOING TO DIE IN HERE!!!

OH... I DIDN'T THINK OF THAT.

HEEEELLPP!!!!

WELL WE HAVE TO TRY AND GET OUT ANYWAY.

THAT'S RIGHT. YOU TWO GO THAT WAY AND THE REST OF US WILL GO THIS WAY.

THE MAIN GROUP THAT STICKS TOGETHER GETS OUT OK, WHILE THE TWO DWEBBS THAT GO OFF ALONE ARE NEVER SEEN AGAIN!!

HANG ON A SECOND - I'VE SEEN THIS IN THE MOVIES ALL THE TIME

YOU'RE OVER-REACTING SHORTY. MAYBE YOU GUYS WILL BE THE ONLY ONES THAT GET OUT.

NOT IF WE HAVE TO GO THAT WAY! IF WE HAVE TO GO THAT WAY WE'RE SURE TO FACE CERTAIN DOOM!

HOW DO YOU KNOW?

CERTAIN DOOM

IT SAYS IT RIGHT THERE!!!

OH, IN THAT CASE, YOU GUYS GO THAT WAY AND THE REST OF US WILL GO THIS WAY.

NOW THAT'S MUCH BETTER.

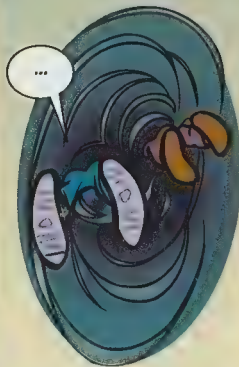

LET'S GO!!

WAIT A MINUTE SHORTY, WE'RE STILL ON OUR OWN!

OOOPS!

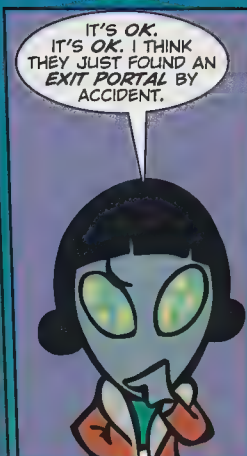

YOU DON'T THINK IT'LL REALLY BE LIKE THE MOVIES DO YOU?

NAH. RELAX BONEHEAD. I WAS JUST SAYING THAT TO.....

AAAAAAHHHHH!!!!
THEY JUST DISAPPEARED!!!!

IT'S OK.
IT'S OK. I THINK
THEY JUST FOUND AN EXIT PORTAL BY ACCIDENT.

COOL DUDE.
SO ALL WE HAVE TO DO IS GO THAT WAY AN WE'LL BE SURFIN'
THE STREETS AGAIN IN NO TIME!

HOORAY!!

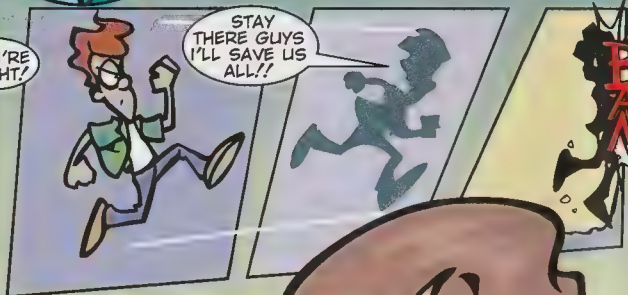

NOT SO
FAST GUYS. REMEMBER, THE EXITS ARE ALWAYS MOVING. IT MAY HAVE MOVED ALREADY.

THERE'S
ONLY ONE WAY
TO FIND OUT. WACKO -
IT'S TIME FOR YOU TO SHINE!

ME????

YUP,
RUN THROUGH THAT EXIT PORTAL.
LEAD US ALL TO SAFETY.
ONLY YOU CAN DO IT.

YOU'RE RIGHT!

THERE GUYS
I'LL SAVE US
ALL!!

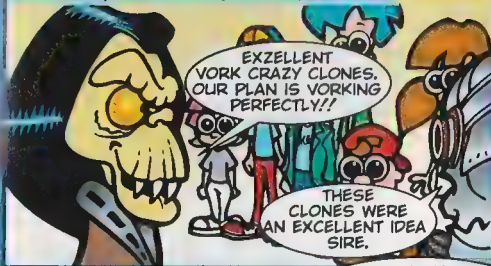

HEHEHEHE...
I GOT HIM
AGAIN.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN?

PORTAL HAS MOVED OVER THERE.
I JUST WANTED TO WATCH HIM KNOCK HIMSELF OUT.

QUICK
EVERYONE - LET'S GET TO
THAT EXIT
PORTAL!

MEANWHILE, BACK AT UGLI HEADQUARTERS...

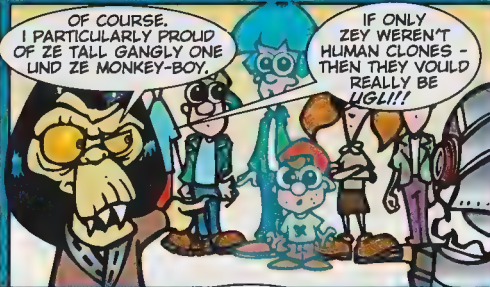

EXZELLENT
VORK CRAZY CLONES.
OUR PLAN IS VORKING PERFECTLY!!

THESE CLONES WERE AN EXCELLENT IDEA
SIRE,

OF COURSE,
I PARTICULARLY PROUD
OF ZE TALL GANGLY ONE
UND ZE MONKEY-BOY.

IF ONLY
ZEY WEREN'T
HUMAN CLONES -
THEN THEY VOULD
REALLY BE UGLI!!

VAIT!!! VAT IS HAPPENING???

VV ARE THEY DISAPPEARING?

THERE'S
ONLY ONE
EXPLANATION
SIRE...

...EITHER
THEIR 'ORIGINALS'
HAVE BEEN CRUSHED TO A PULP
BY THE ATOMIC PREFUNCTIONARY
FRIBULISER IN THE CENTRE OF THE MAZE, OR THEY HAVE FOUND AN EXIT
PORTAL.

THAT'S
TWO EXPLANATIONS.
HUMPH... AND THEY CALL HIM 'BRAINS'

ZILENCE
FOOL!!! SO THEY MAY HAVE FOUND A WAY OUT, EH?

WHAT SHALL WE DO
SIRE?

WE NEED TO DELAY ZEM AT LEAST UNTIL ZE PARTY ON SUNDAY.

IT'S TIME FOR PLAN
'B'!

HUUUUHHHHH???

NOT THE....

YES!!
IT'S TIME TO ZEND IN...

TOOTHIE!

TWO DAYS LATER, IN THE MAZE OF DOOM...

IT'S NO
USE CLYDE, WE'RE DONE FOR. WE'LL NEVER FIND THAT EXIT PORTAL
AGAIN.

DON'T GIVE UP NOW
ROXY, IT COULD BE JUST AROUND THIS CORNER.

OR THROUGH
THIS DOOR - IT SAY'S
'ATOMIC PREFUNCTIONARY
FRIBULISER'

I DON'T LIKE THE SOUND
OF THAT. LET'S GO
THROUGH THIS DOOR.

WEE!
CLOSE THAT DOOR!!!!

WHAT'LL
WE DO NOW? WHICH WAY SHOULD WE GO???

FIND OUT NEXT MONTH IN DMAG.

SPACECAPADES

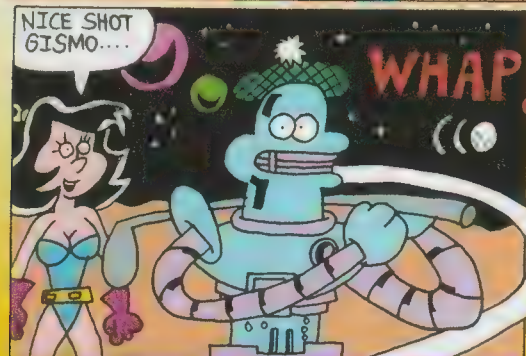

BY: ZANE

THE SPACECAPADES HAVE COME TO A LONELY, POCK-MARKED ASTEROID FOR A ROUND OF EIGHTEEN-CRATER GOLF....

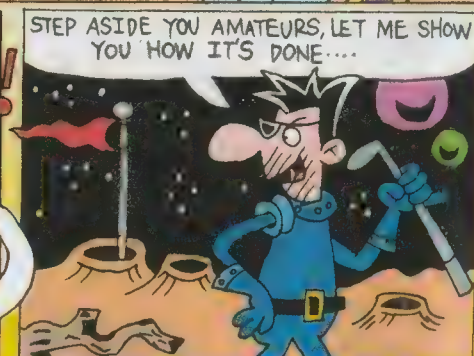

NICE SHOT GISMO....

WHAP!

STEP ASIDE YOU AMATEURS, LET ME SHOW YOU HOW IT'S DONE....

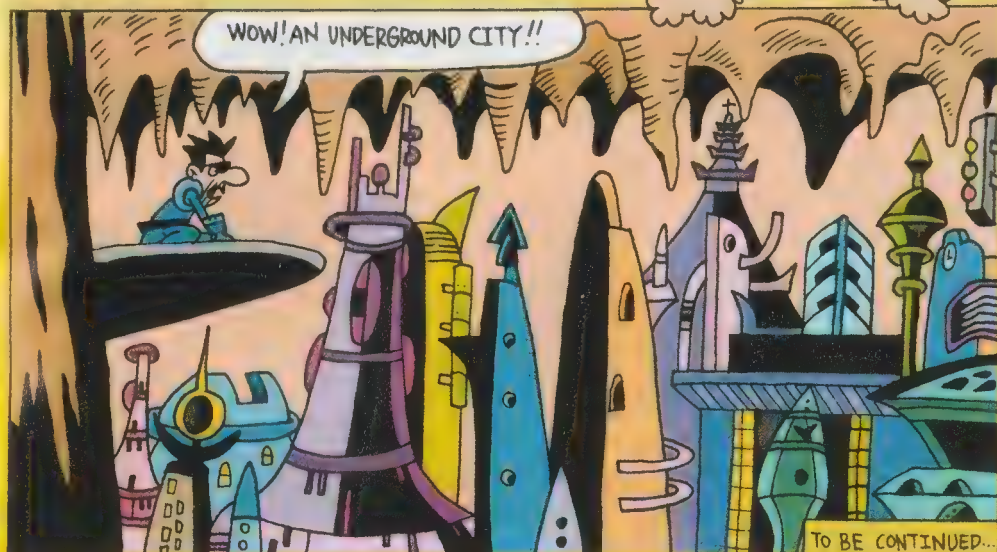

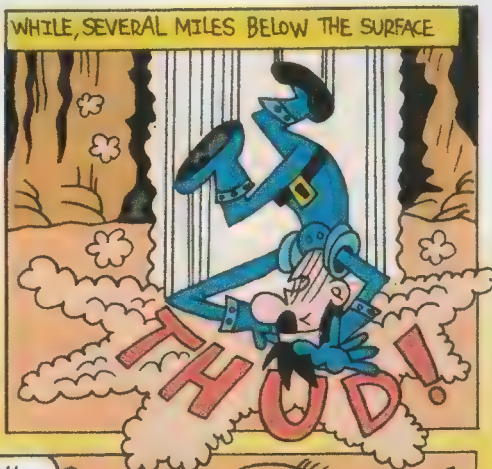

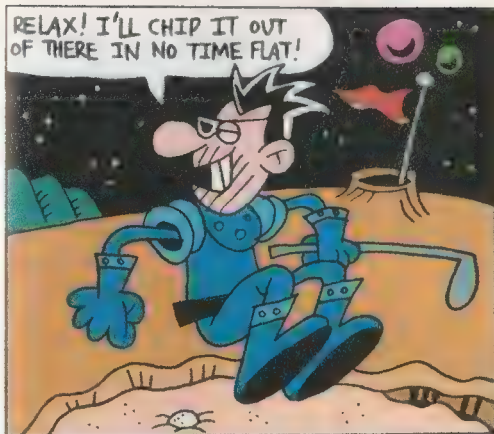

RATS! I SLICED IT...

HA! HA! IT ROLLED STRAIGHT INTO THE SAND TRAP! THAT COSMIC DUST PIT...

Ned Kelly

by Mitch

THAT WAS COOL FUN, DECORATING
THE TREE

AND NOW FOR THE LIGHTS, AND IT'S FINISHED

HEY, I WANTED TO HELP TOO!

WHOOOPS,
SORRY ABOUT THAT

A LITTLE WHILE LATER

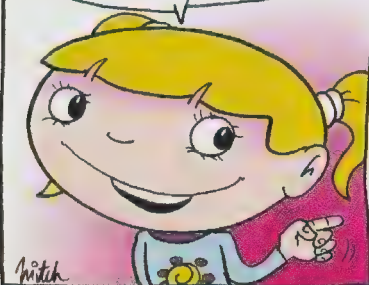

HEY, WHERE DID
HE GO!

HE WAS QUITE UPSET, SO....

I SAID HE COULD
DECORATE THE ROOM!
